City makes plea for more county ARP funds

Pledge of money now would reduce water bills later

BY BOB DEMAREE

With Jefferson County set to receive $6.2 million in American Rescue Plan funds to be allocated by county officials, a combined meeting of the County Council and County Commissioners was held Tuesday night to discuss how that money will be spent.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney and three members of Madison City Council — Curtis Chatham, Lucy Dattilo and Katie Rampy — also showed up seeking a bigger piece of the pie for a drinking water infrastructure project that is estimated to cost $15 million and benefit both city and county residents. Additionally, J.D. Webster of the Madison Riverfront Development Committee was on hand asking for a $250,000 contribution toward funding that group's "super overlook" on the Ohio River.

In August, the Commissioners submitted a proposal for the $3.1 million they will receive as the first half of the ARP money. But on Tuesday, they presented an updated draft pending review by the legal firm Barnes and Thornburg of Indianapolis.

On Tuesday, the updated plan presented includes $3,920,000 in appropriations under specific categories with projects they have defined for consideration, pending the legal review.

There is $20,000 for administration, which covers the expense of Barnes and Thornburg in reviewing the county's plans to spend the money to ensure they meet requirements in how it's spent to avoid having to repay monies the county might spend incorrectly according to the ARP spending guidelines.

In the category of negative economic impacts from COVID-19, the total is $1,450,000. Of that, $50,000 would go to county festivals for infrastructure projects. The remaining $1,400,000 would be divided among the county's 14 fire departments with each receiving $100,000.

There is $150,000 directed

Predator sting nets another conviction

BY MARK CAMPBELL

A Jennings County man was found guilty of attempting to solicit sex from a 14-year-old girl in a bench trial before Jefferson County Circuit Judge D.J. Mote on Tuesday.

Dennis Lloyd Mothersbaugh, 41, of North Vernon, Indiana, was one of 20 men arrested in Madison Police Department's online child solicitation sting Operation Predator Net in 2020.

Dennis Lloyd Mothersbaugh

Mothersbaugh, like the others, thought he was meeting a 14-year-old girl for sex, but instead was arrested by police officers on Sept. 7, 2020, at a city park shelterhouse on Madison's hilltop.

According to the probable cause affidavit, on Aug. 27, 2020, Mothersbaugh initiated an online chat with a profile depicting a 14-year-old girl; the two discussed the girl's age during their conversation. Mothersbaugh referred to the profile as "Sexy Butt," discussed taking her on a motorcycle ride, and referenced the "pleasure" that he would give her. On Sept. 6, 2020, Mothersbaugh made arrangements to meet the profile at Johnson Lake on Madison's hilltop. He continuously

Madison Police provide traffic control as contractors work to stripe parking spaces in the 700 block of West Main Street in downtown Madison. That section of highway was recently reduced from four lanes to three lanes as a test to see how that and other changes might impact and calm traffic flow. The city has scheduled an open house on Monday to provide updates and gather feedback on Main Street moving forward.

Main Street open house at Brown Gym on Monday

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER

In an effort to assist city officials and designers making decisions regarding the design and long-term plans for Madison's Main Street, there will be an open house on Monday at the Brown Gym to gather feedback from the public.

The open house will run from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 15, with a presentation followed by individual stations followed by an opportunity to get answers to questions at a series of stations on the various aspects of the project.

"Main Street is so much more to our community than just the movement of vehicle traffic. Over time and with community involvement, we will elevate the potential this area has dramatically. We look forward to the future of Madison's Main Street and hope you will join us for this open house," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney.

The event is hosted by the City of Madison Office of Planning, Preservation and Design along with Ratio, the design consultant for the project, and Jacobi Toombs and Lanz, the project engineers. Representatives from the city, the Main Street Steering Committee, and the design team will be in attendance.

The brief presentation will include site analysis and a recap of steering committee meetings and traffic engineering studies. Additionally, there will also be discussion of "tactical urbanism" measures that use short-term, low-cost interventions to demonstrate how reducing

Senior dances continue to draw good crowds

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

Gary Hewitt is a man of many interests and talents. He's a huge IU basketball fan, and was a standout player himself back when Dupont had a high school. He's an accomplished musician, starting as a teen when he taught himself guitar, until today some 60 years later, still leading bands and making people dance.

And he's a true community treasure, the kind of selfless and tireless person every organization needs to keep the wheels turning and the doors open.

I caught up with Gary at the downtown Senior Center, where he'd just opened the doors for anybody who wanted to come in and maybe play some euchre. "I work here three days a week," Gary told me. "Plus I play a lot of the Senior Dances they have over at the Brown Gym on Fridays."

But before we got into the music, I couldn't resist talking basketball with Gary. "I grew up in Dupont, and I could walk to the gym. The janitor would let me in and I would practice shooting, pretty much every spare hour that I wasn't mowing grass or working on a farm.

"I got where I could hit the basket pretty good. We played all the small high schools back then, most of which are gone now. Lexington, Paris Crossing, Vernon, New Marion and Deputy. Some were so small you could barely maneuver.

"My senior year we drew Madison in the first game of the sectional, playing in their brand new Salm Gym, it would have been 1962. Now the thing you need to know about Madison at that time, they were ranked third in the state, they were undefeated for the season, and they had Mr. Basketball Larry Humes on the team."

So how'd you do, I asked,

Madison Police Patrolman Josh Nolan executed the traffic stop near Mouser Street at approximately 8:54 p.m. and noticed the presence of narcotics in the vehicle. That led to a search of the passenger compartment in which a crystal type substance that tested positive for methamphetamine was discovered along with marijuana, drug paraphernalia and a legend drug.

The driver, Corey Wayne Creech, 28, Deputy, and a passenger, Amber Nichole Reffett, 29, Madison, were arrested on various drug charges.

Both face preliminary charges of Possession of a Legend Drug and Possession of Methamphetamine, both Level 6 felonies; Possession of Paraphernalia, a Class B misdemeanor; and Possession of Marijuana, a Class C misdemeanor. DANCES expecting some kind of Cinderella "Hoosiers" ending to the tale? "Oh, we got creamed," Gary said, smiling. "I think we scored first, but not much after that!"

Moving on to Gary's life in music, he outlined a rich and full career playing bars and social clubs all over the region. "My first band was called the Good Times Band, and we played the old country tunes, Hank and Johnny and Waylon and Merle and the boys.

"Next was Gary Smitha's band Ramblin' Fever, then came Rebel and the Hoosier Beats. And then I was in a band with Gary Guarino called Main Street.

"About that time in the late '80s the Senior Center here in Madison started having dances every Friday. I played there in a band with Charlie Humphrey, Mike Dean, Tommy Day and the McKays from over in Milton. Nerdell Adler and Ann Leland ran the Senior Dance bands in those days.

"Later on I had a band called the Alliance Band with Danny Lang, Fred Scroggins, and Marvin Maxwell. Lee Bartrum, who died just last year, was also in the band, and he was the best steel player I've ever seen. It's really just me and Mike Dean still around from the old days.

"Starting about 2009 the dances moved over to the Brown Gym, and Narci Burress took over managing. We have a bunch of bands coming up in December, so watch the music calendar for updates.

"Mayor Bob Courtney came to one of our dances a few weeks ago, and he couldn't believe it. He'd never been to one and didn't know what to expect. What he saw was about 50 people out on the floor, dancing to every single song. Fast dances, slow dances, waltz's, line dances, you name it.

"We still play a lot of the old country songs, but the clientele these days also want a good mix of classic rock and roll. We play it all and keep it lively. Nothing too heavy, just great dance music that everybody knows and loves."

Bouncing back from infidelity

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My 30-year-old grandson is incarcerated right now on charges of drug possession and shoplifting. This is one of many drug possession charges he has faced in the past two years, and he has multiple court cases coming up in November. While I have done everything I can to support and help him, nothing has worked. His behavior has caused a lot of grief and pain to me and my daughter. He stopped talking to me a couple of months ago, and it really hurts me. I'm at a loss as to what to do at this point. I'm seeing a counselor right now, which helps. — Grieving Papa

Dear Grieving Papa: I'm so sorry about your grandson. One of the toughest pills to swallow is that we can't help people who don't want to help themselves. Stay close to your daughter and continue to show your grandson your unconditional love.

Hopefully, one day he sees the light.

Dear Annie: I have been married for the past 15 years and have three children (one adult, two teenagers). I cheated on my husband 10 years ago and have apologized, and I thought we had worked through it.

My husband is not perfect. He has problems with alcoholism and has had multiple DUIs in the past and even spent time in jail.

I am at a breaking point. He is still throwing the cheating in my face daily. He is upset because his grown children have a lot of memories of him yelling at them. He says he yells at them because he is angry at me. My husband does not trust me, and I have no friends and never go out or do anything on my own. However, he can go out whenever he wants.

He says that he is just going through the motions to get through the day. I said if he is still that angry and dwelling on the past, then we should get a divorce because that is no way to live. He says if we get divorced, then no one wins, and the kids will be affected. I'm not sure how much more of the berating and verbal abuse I can take. I feel like a prisoner in my own home with nowhere to turn and everything I do is wrong. Please help. — Stuck

Dear Stuck: It sounds like your husband has some deep-seated issues with anger and alcoholism. It's a bit of a chicken-or-the-egg scenario — a toss-up as to which came first — but one is surely adding fuel to the other's fire.

Yes, you broke a marriage vow. But it sounds like you're willing to work hard at repairing the relationship, looking forward rather than dwelling on the past.

Your husband, on the other hand, is keeping you both trapped in an arrangement where nothing is addressed, nothing is overcome and nothing is resolved. He clearly cares about his family — but he never processed the betrayal he felt from your cheating, nor is he able to cope in healthy ways. Find a couples therapist you both like to address the root of the problem.

I've spent decades with a dud

Dear Annie: I've been in a relationship with "Jason" since April 2001. We got engaged in 2007. I lived apart from him with my three kids as they were still young and in school. I moved in with him in 2010.

Ever since then, and before, it's just gotten worse. I was so blind in love and drinking with him all the time that I guess I really didn't see the whole picture. I've been relatively sober since 2016. Eliminating hard alcohol helped clear my mind.

I realized he is a bit of a narcissistic man and can only see past his nose. I've suspected for many years he is having an affair. I went through menopause in 2011, so my libido literally disappeared in an instant.

I feel he only has me there at his house because he said he "needs me." What about want me? The arguments have escalated.

I know he can't read or write too well and has a limited complex vocabulary. He won't admit it, and I wish he would have or would now. I wouldn't like him less. When you live with someone, you accept things like that. I happen to have a decently high IQ, so his babbling in elementary terms does not help me to have serious adult conversations.

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

I'm looking to get out and buy a condo so I can have my own place again, clear my head and be mentally healthy. I will still date him if he still wants to and see if we can repair our relationship. We are both ready to retire in several years.

Gosh, if we're fighting like this now, what would it be like if we were together 24/7? I'm afraid to go there. What do you think? — Kick Him to the Curb

Dear Kick: No number of years with Jason can change the fact that you've been with someone who hasn't emotionally or intellectually fulfilled you for decades.

Your history with Jason shouldn't be a reason to let your personal happiness fall by the wayside.

Follow through on buying your condo and spend time alone. Consider what you want. Is it a relationship you want to repair?

Give some thought to how you want to spend your retirement, too. Between the fighting, his drinking, his narcissism and possible infidelity, I'd bet the coming years will be much more tiresome than retirement with him around.

Dear Annie: This is in response to the 52-year-old "Overwhelmed and Unsure" who is the caregiver for her brother. I would recommend that she help her brother apply for Section 8 federally subsidized housing. He can have his own apartment, and his rent will be based on his income. He can get public assistance (food stamps). My brother-in-law is pretty much in the same position (on Social Security Disability Insurance, recovering alcoholic, can't hold down a job) and he lives independently in a very nice Section 8 apartment in NYC and receives Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits. We are his payee for his Social Security Disability Insurance and ensure his rent and utility bills are paid on time. Someone from the County Department of Social Services should be able to assist her with applying for these benefits. — Similar Situation

Dear Similar Situation: Thank you for this informed response. I hope other readers will find it useful.

Southwestern reaches agreement with teachers

BY BOB DEMAREE

Southwestern Jefferson County Schools approved a two-year agreement with the Southwestern Jefferson Classroom Teachers Association at its meeting on Tuesday.

Superintendent Jeffrey Bates noted the contract provides a $4,500 increase to base salaries in year one, which is an average of about 7.35% per returning teacher plus a $500 stipend for each returning teacher. In year two, there will be a $1,750 increase to base salaries, an average of about 4.37% per returning teacher, along with another $500 stipend for each returning teacher.

Bates said the deal also includes an attendance incentive where any teacher who misses five or fewer days per year — and attends parent/teacher conferences and Southwestern High School graduation ceremonies— qualifies for a $750 stipend.

The salary range for Southwestern teachers is $40,750 to $72,750.

In other business, the board:

• Adopted the Southwestern School Corporation's $15,080,321 budget for a second time due to an error in what was submitted to the state did not list the maximum estimated levy amounts. Because the budget deadline had passed, the Department of Local Government Finance gave permission to rescind the first adoption and readvertise for the second adoption meeting in which approval was given for a budget of the same amount as the first adoption.

• Approved the purchase two items pending funding available by the end of the year, and if not the purchase will be delayed until next year. The first was for phishing security in which KnowBe4 presented two quotes at one year for $2,512 and three years for $5,356. Laura Cash Boldery, assistant to the superintendent, said Kevin Dillman, director of technology, preferred the three-year quote because it is more cost effective. Assistant superintendent Jason Watson said the security program is needed because it's required by the property and casualty insurance company as required ransomware coverage. Quotes were also presented for auto scrubbers at the high school with Phillips Supply submitting the lowest bid at $9,096.07.

• Southwestern counselors Denise Hackney and Brittany Watson shared information on a survey for students in grades 3-12 to help the counselors track data to assist the students with academics and social/emotional learning. Parents will be notified before the survey is given out.

messaged the profile until his arrival on that Sunday evening.

Around 9 p.m. a female MPD officer dressed in civilian clothing was seated at the pre-arranged shelterhouse when Mothersbaugh drove up. Mothersbaugh was ordered out of the vehicle and as officers attempted to restrain him, he forcefully resisted before the officers restrained him. During a search of Mothersbaugh and his vehicle, officers located marijuana. In the messaging, Mothersbaugh had discussed "getting stoned" with the profile.

"This case demonstrates the dangers social media can pose to teenagers," said Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter. "Unfortunately, there are sexual predators out there every day attempting to lure young people into very dangerous situations."

Mothersbaugh was found guilty of Child Solicitation and Attempted Sexual Misconduct with a Minor, both Level 4 felonies; and Possession of Marijuana and Resisting Law Enforcement, both Class B misdemeanors. Level 4 felonies are punishable by up to 12 years in prison and fines of up to $10,000. He was found innocent on a charge of possession of paraphernalia, also a misdemeanor.

Deputy Prosecutor Melissa Campbell represented the State of Indiana in the case, while Mothersbaugh was represented by Public Defender James Curtis Spencer. Mote has scheduled Mothersbaugh's sentencing hearing on Nov. 29, and revoked bail pending that hearing.

Sutter praised the efforts of law enforcement as another defendant in Operation Predator Net was convicted.

"I would like to thank Detectives Shawn Scudder and Kyle Cutshaw along with Senior Patrolman Aaron Watson, and all of the Madison Police Department, for great police work and their assistance at the trial," Sutter said.

Mothersbaugh has previous convictions in Jennings, Jackson and Bartholomew counties on charges ranging from marijuana possession to driving while intoxicated and resisting law enforcement. He also made national news in 2018 for his arrest and guilty plea for assault and battery during a 2017 "Unite the Right" rally in Charlottesville, Virginia.

So far eight of the 20 defendants in Operation Predator Net have either been convicted or accepted plea agreements in the sting.

traffic lanes might affect overall traffic flow.

Following the presentation, attendees are invited to visit the series of stations to view project graphics and respond to specific issues that the design team, steering committee and stakeholders have identified as items for additional feedback. Each of these stations will be attended by a member of the design team or the steering committee to help answer questions.

Stations will include the following topics: 1.) Reaction to the temporary lane reduction between Broadway and Cragmont streets; 2.) The inclusion and preferred location of multi-modal transportation lanes; 3.) The public's input on the appropriate balance of the overall cost of the project — the "invisible" (such as infrastructure improvements) vs. the "visible" (decorative pavement, site furnishings, lighting, etc.)

SuperATV expansion TIF Zone advances

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Plan Commission adopted a resolution Monday night that would reconfigure the North Madison Economic Development Area so that SuperATV can become its own allocation area in terms of taxing and financing expansion.

The action was the second of three approvals the Madison company needs to be considered its own Tax Incremental Finance zone with a goal of helping the company raise money through bonds for a $71 million expansion that would create 373 new jobs.

Mayor Bob Courtney said the proposal has already gone before and received approval from the city's Redevelopment Commission and, once approved by the Plan Commission, the agreement would only need City Council approval.

Courtney said SuperATV, a maker and distributor of all-terrain vehicle parts, is one of the fastest growing companies in the state and country and has a proven track record as a good corporate citizen to Madison.

The plant has already undergone multiple expansions and is now pursuing more growth with a new 135,000 square foot warehouse at its factory at 2753 Michigan Road as well as development of a new innovation center at 1200 Clifty Drive. To do that the privately-owned company would like to sell bonds, which requires a Tax Incremental Financing (TIF) zone.

Although SuperATV is already a part of the North Madison Economic Development Area, the company has asked to be removed from that zone and isolated in its own TIF zone, which requires Plan Commission approval.

"This helps them finance their expansion ... and creates its own district," Courtney said of the proposal.

The Plan Commission unanimously approved the resolution and the proposal will now be sent before City Council for final approval.

In other business:

• The Commission heard a proposal by Pettit Properties LLC to develop a 58-lot subdivision on about 12 total acres on County Road East 400 North and a request to rezone the property from residential/agricultural to residential.

Plan Commission members noted concern about the request because the overall acreage would support only about half that many homes based on lot size restrictions and a variance to allow that many more building sites was unlikely considering that other subdivisions in the area have adhered to existing standards.

No action was taken on the proposal.

• The Commission adopted a resolution to combine three adjoining lots recently purchased by the City of Madison between 301 and 307 East Vaughn Drive into one larger parcel.

Nicole M. Schell, director of planning for the city, said there are "no plans" for the property currently but the administration wants to "clean up" the deeds to make one parcel. Most of the land, a former coal yard now used for storage, is in the flood plain so development would be limited.

toward premium pay for highway department, sheriff deputies, jail officers and 911 dispatcher as essential workers during the COVID-19 pandemic. Bramer noted that clarification is needed by Barnes and Thornburg about which county employees would be eligible to receive the additional stipend.

Also, $1,200,000 has been earmarked for revenue replacement including equipment for the highway department, Emergency Management Agency, 911 and the Sheriff's office, along with grant matching funds for Jefferson County development projects.

The Commissioners also included $1,100,000 for water infrastructure including capital projects for the county's water companies and stormwater management projects.

During the summer, the City of Madison had requested $2.5 million toward a $15 million drinking water infrastructure project, but the Commissioners allocated $200,000. The city also requested assistance for a $425,000 Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE) comprehensive plan to evaluate causes of flooding and develop strategies for stormwater infrastructure to mitigate any possible flash flooding disasters in the future, and the Commissioners allocated $100,000.

Even with Tuesday's proposal including $1,100,000 toward water infrastructure, the Commissioners expressed that would be divided among the county's water companies, which include Madison, Dupont, Canaan, Rykers' Ridge, Kent and Hanover.

Courtney noted that Dupont, Canaan and Rykers' Ridge all receive their water from Madison, and the cost of the drinking water infrastructure project will significantly impact the rates for each of those water companies in addition to those receiving water from Madison. With engineering work already underway, Courtney noted Madison has "shovel ready" infrastructure projects which he expressed is the intention of how the ARP monies are to be spent.

The city had sought a $5 million State Water Infrastructure Fund (SWIF) grant from the Indiana Finance Authority, but the application was rejected. The mayor cited two reasons for the denial — one being that there wasn't a strong enough local participation due to not receiving adequate support from the county, and because the state deemed Madison's water rates as being too low.

However, Courtney noted the cost of the drinking water infrastructure project will greatly increase the water rates to pay for the project, but that could be lowered with a more significant contribution from the ARP funds.

"This is a great opportunity," he said, noting it's been approximately two decades since water infrastructure has been upgraded. Improvements are now needed at the water treatment plant and work is needed on more than 22,000 linear feet of water distribution lines.

"We don't want to become another Flint, Michigan," Council member Ray Black Jr. said, referring to a water supply crisis that resulted in contaminated water that made people sick. Black emphasized that drinking water infrastructure is an issue that must be addressed.

Council member Gary Copeland agreed, noting "This needs to be done quickly, and save the taxpayers the most money, point blank."

Dattilo said it's about "planning for the future" and "making this a better place for the future," without burdening residents with the financial pressures of greatly higher water bills. "We have a responsibility" it's "needed to happen for a long time."

Commissioner Bobby Little noted they wouldn't be having the discussion if the ARP money had not come available. He said it's "not totally fair" that the Commissioners be criticized for how they have considered using the money.

Meanwhile, the Commissioners asked why the city did not use more of its $2.4 million allocation in ARP funds for the drinking water project. Courtney explained that the city's funds are earmarked for flood mitigation efforts after flash flooding caused significant local damage twice in the last six years. "We're planning for it, but we're facing millions of infrastructure to mitigate it," he said.

Courtney said the ARP funds were "a Godsend" allowing the city and county to address critical matters that might not otherwise be funded. He said that's why they "need to work together" to tackle those issues, and that more financial support from the county now would provide clean water and lessen the burden of higher water rates on residents in the future.

"This is massive project that is going to impact all of us," Council member Heather Foy said.

Council president Pam Crozier agreed, "For the taxpayers of Jefferson County, this is an opportunity to inject" money into the drinking water infrastructure project from ARP funds to lessen any water rate increases for those who use water from Madison, Canaan, Dupont and Rykers' Ridge. She noted she "highly recommends" funding the project but that the Commissioners are the ones charged with that duty. "I don't have the magic pens" she noted.

Following the discussion about the drinking water infrastructure, Webster asked for $250,000 toward the super outlook, which he said is a $1.7 million project of which $900,000 has currently been raised. Black expressed support, noting "we need to continue to develop our riverfront" because of the people that it draws to the county.

MADISON COURIER VOLLEYBALL PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Madison Consolidated High School junior Chloe Preocanin is the Madison Courier Volleyball Player of the Year.

Nina Campbell

Preocanin's all-around game leads Madison to success

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Chloe Preocanin was pleased with her sophomore season, but she knew she could do better. Resolved to become a more complete volleyball player, the Madison Consolidated High School star began looking at all aspects of her game, determined to improve in her junior year.

That offseason work paid dividends. Known primarily as a hitter, Preocanin transformed into an all-around player capable of controlling all aspects of the game.

"You would rather have a player that can play every position than one that can just play one. So it was really big for me this year to work on my back court," Preocanin said. "I was always wondering about what I should do better in the back row. How am I putting my arms wrong? How did that ball just get off in the wrong instead of me? I feel like last year I was mainly dominant on just my hitting, and I felt like this year I needed to focus on another thing except for that because I knew I had like a pretty solid foundation there and I wanted to improve in another space."

Improve she did. Preocanin finished in the top five in the area in three of the five main statistical categories, led or was second on her team in four of those categories and was named an Indiana High School Volleyball Coaches Association All-District player while leading Madison to its best season in four years.

"I think that Chloe (Preocanin) is one of the pillars of our team. She's a go-to and we benefit from her passing in the back row."

— Camille Crim
Madison volleyball coach

It was for those reasons that Preocanin is this year's Madison Courier Volleyball Player of the Year. Although she was surprised by the honor, it was a no-brainer to her coach.

"I think that Chloe is one of the pillars of our team. She's a go-to and we benefit from her passing in the back row," Madison coach Camille Crim said.

"And we always look to push the ball to her in the front row to end a point or to score. I think this year she has taken on that role and appreciated it and has accepted that she's our go-to. She's not as scared to be that and she's really broadened what she can do."

Preocanin comes from a volleyball family. Father Peter is head coach of Hanover College's volleyball program, and both of her parents were Division III

Stefanovic, No. 7 Purdue top Bellarmine

BY MARK AMBROGI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE — Purdue's Sasha Stefanovic got in a groove from the outside. That's because of what his teammates were doing inside.

Stefanovic made 5 of 6 3-pointers and finished with 23 points to lead No. 7 Purdue past Bellarmine 96-67 on Tuesday night.

"We have a lot of credit across the board," Stefanovic said. "If they are focusing in on Zach (Edey) and Trevion (Williams) in the post, we have to be able to knock down shots and execute our game plan. Our bigs are really good passing out of the post."

Edey added 16 points, Isaiah Thompson had 15 points, Brandon Newman 14 and Jaden Ivey 11 for the Boilermakers.

C.J. Fleming and Dylan Penn each scored 14 points for Bellarmine.

Thompson scored 12 of his 15 in the first half, and 3s accounted for all his points.

"Guys were just finding me for me for open 3s," Thompson said. "It was just being ready to shoot when you know teams are going to over-help, get it (in) a good rhythm and knock it down. You want to take open shots, that's what coach (Matt) Painter preaches. He doesn't like when we take bad shots. But when you are open, he wants every shooter to shoot the ball."

Thompson said he has improved with more experience.

"I've been through two years of college basketball and a lot of ups and downs personally and as a team," he said. "I'm just more confident. I think it just comes with time and experience."

The Boilermakers, who made 16 of 34 3s, led by as many as 36 points in the second half. Purdue shot 50% for the game while the Knights were held to 41%.

"A lot of our 3-pointers were rotation and moving the ball and their guys overplaying in the post" Painter said. "It was hard for us to simulate the way they play and the way they move the ball in practice. This was a great game for us to play because they are so different from everyone else. They have the same thing with our size. When you have someone like Trevion, who can pass the ball, it puts people in a bind."

Williams, who averaged 15.5 points last season, was patient. He hit his only shot and two free throws for four points. Williams added seven rebounds and three assists.

Purdue broke open the game with a 19-3 run that produced a 40-23 lead. The Boilermakers led 50-37 at half.

BIG PICTURE

Purdue: The Boilermakers have won nine straight season openers by an average of 28 points and are 16-1 in openers under Painter.

Bellarmine: The Knights are in their second season in Division I and aren't afraid to play the big boys. Last year they opened against Duke, and this season they'll play No. 1 Gonzaga and No. 2 UCLA on back-to-back nights next week.

TIP-INS

Purdue will be back to full strength after Mason Gillis serves two more games in his four-game suspension, which included the team's exhibition. Contending, shaky Bengals eye 2nd half

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The off week is coming at an opportune time for the Cincinnati Bengals, who followed a promising start to the 2021 season with two bumbling losses in a row.

Who knows which version of the Bengals will show up next?

The Bengals (5-4) are still a much improved and so far winning team — they've already won one more game than all of last year — but there's no question the past two weeks have been a mess.

So there is some measure of hand-wringing in the Cincinnati camp at the halfway point, but confidence that the culture coach Zac Taylor has worked hard to build will keep the team from spiraling.

Fortunately for the Bengals, there's also a bye week to help them try to reset.

"I think people are going to try to paint a picture of overreaction when you lose two games in a row — we're not," Taylor said.

"We're going to correct those things that we need to correct and use this bye week to get our bodies back and make sure we're healthy going into the back half of the season.

"This isn't unusual for teams to lose two games in a row in this league," he said. "It feels awful, trust me, to sit here after two consecutive losses. It's important we're consistent with our approach throughout. We know we've done some good things over these first nine games of the season."

The Bengals were rolling at 5-2, their best start in six years, picking up their fifth victory with a joyful 41-7 smashing of AFC North bully Baltimore on the road.

Then something happened, although nobody can say exactly what. The Bengals took a baffling 34-31 loss to the then-1-5 New York Jets. On Sunday they got kicked all over Paul Brown Stadium by the Cleveland Browns, whose 41-16 victory was the largest margin over their in-state rivals since 1987.

Not to worry, quarterback Joe Burrow said.

"I know the guys we have in that locker room," he said. "We've got tough, resilient guys that are excited to come back to work. (Sunday was) a tough day. We didn't play very well, and it showed on the field. We're halfway through the season, so we've still got a long ways to go. Everything is still in front of us, and we're going to come back to work ready to go."

WHAT'S WORKING

Much is on the shoulders of Burrow. Not much was working well against the Browns, but overall the Bengals' offense still turns on the skill and creativity of Burrow, who remains among the NFL leaders in several passing categories. He has been good at exploiting defenses, but his two interceptions Sunday were killers, especially the 99-yard pick-six by Denzel Ward in the first quarter.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

The defense was a strength in the first part of the season, but has been inconsistent and has missed an alarming number of tackles lately. Lots of plays that should have been snuffed out became big gains. Burrow is still getting hit too much. The pass blocking has not been good enough. Burrow was hit 12 times and sacked five times Sunday.

STOCK UP

NFL teams don't like to waste draft picks on kickers, but Evan McPherson has been money. The fifth-round 2021 pick out of Florida, McPherson left with the best field-goal percentage in SEC history (85%). He's had two winning field goals and missed getting another by inches. He's made 11 of 14 attempts and all 27 PATs.

STOCK DOWN

A few weeks ago, rookie receiver Ja'Marr Chase was making explosive plays and being talked about as a candidate for NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year. That chatter has died down.

He caught just three passes for 32 yards in the Jets loss and followed that with his worst game as a pro vs. Cleveland. He dropped a pass in the end zone, dropped another that might have carried him into the end zone, and lost a fumble the Browns turned into points.

INJURIES

CB Trae Waynes, who missed all of last season with a pectoral issue, went on injured reserve last month with a hamstring injury. ... G Xavier Su'a-Filo has been out with a knee injury for a month. ... LB Jordan Evans (knee) is on the injured list. ... S/KR Brandon Wilson and LB Akeem Davis-Gaither (foot) went out of Sunday's game and didn't return. Taylor said Wilson tore his ACL. There was no update available on Davis-Gaither. ... DE Cam Sample and WR Auden Tate were ruled out on Monday with unspecified issues.

KEY NUMBER

25 — sacks of Burrow, third most in the NFL.

NEXT STEPS

Every player who stepped to the podium after Sunday's loss spoke of the team's culture and how their regard for each other will help them get through this rough patch. The Bengals have displayed their potential but haven't learned how to play up to it week after week. They start the second half of the schedule on Nov. 21 against the Raiders (6-2).

Getting Wentz paying dividends with Indianapolis in playoff hunt

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indianapolis Colts took a calculated risk by trading for Carson Wentz in March.

Halfway through the season, the move is paying big dividends.

Wentz has helped the Colts navigate their way from a 1-4 start back into the playoff picture with three wins in their last four games and his confidence appears to be growing by the week.

"He's been playing a lot of good football," coach Frank Reich said after Indy steamrolled the New York Jets 45-30. "He had a couple things at the end of the last game but he was flawless (Thursday). He was stinkin' flawless — except for the pass to Nyheim (Hines), which he should have hit that one. That was a bad throw."

Wentz hasn't been perfect, as two poor throws in the final $7\frac{1}{2}$ minutes against Tennessee attest. Those interceptions and that overtime loss could cost the Colts (4-5) a shot at the AFC South title.

There have been other bumps along the way. He was intercepted on a goal-line shovel pass to Jack Doyle in Week 2, a potentially decisive play in what turned out to be a 27-24 loss to the Los Angeles Rams. He couldn't quite close out what looked like an almost certain victory at Baltimore, though that was not entirely his fault.

But the stats and the game tape don't lie.

Despite limited offseason work with his new teammates, missing most of training camp because of foot surgery and spraining both ankles against the Rams, Wentz's completion percentage is back in the mid-60s. He's on pace for a career-high 4,152 yards in the league's first 17-game season, and he's thrown 17 TDs with three interceptions.

"I think we're making good progress, I think he's making great progress," Reich said. "I think if before the year started and we took a poll and said: 'Nine games into it Carson is going to have 17 TDs and three interceptions, would you take that?'

"I think we all would."

Wentz also is throwing more deep balls, an indication he and his receivers are increasingly working from the same page. Playing behind an offensive line that has steadily become healthier and stronger also has helped, and with Jonathan Taylor in contention for the league rushing title, Wentz has everything he needs to fulfill the potential scouts saw when he was the No. 2 overall draft pick in 2016.

All he has to do now is cash in.

"I am so encouraged by what I am seeing offensively and how we're able to move the ball in so many different ways," Wentz said Thursday night. "Coach (Reich) does a tremendous job keeping defenses on their toes, and I look forward to more of that the second half of the season."

WHAT'S WORKING

Running game. Indy finished with a league-high 260 yards rushing against a run defense that was ranked No. 7. Taylor clearly has kicked it into high gear with four 100-yard games this season and a league-best streak of six straight games with 100 or more yards from scrimmage and a TD.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

Pass rush. When the Colts struggle, it's largely because opposing quarterbacks have picked apart an injury-depleted secondary. Yes, staying healthy would help. So would more consistent pressure.

STOCK UP

Hines. As Taylor delivers the highlights, Hines is the ideal complementary back. He had a nifty 34-yard TD run to start the scoring Thursday and finished with six carries for 74 yards while catching four passes for 34 yards. The Colts already rewarded Hines with a three-year contract extension.

STOCK DOWN

Three-time Pro Bowl CB Xavier Rhodes has struggled this season in part because of injuries. A blown coverage led to the Jets' first score Thursday and it's not the first time he's been beaten this season. Indy needs the 31-year-old Rhodes to play better.

KEY NUMBER

7 — The Colts are one of seven AFC teams with four wins and might need seven more wins to make the playoffs.

NEXT STEPS

A second straight victory would put Indianapolis at .500 for the first time this season. The Colts have been playing better since their brutal five-game stretch to open the schedule. But to make the playoffs — and win in the postseason — they must start beating some playoff-caliber teams.

Ohio State moves into CFP position; Cincy 5th

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No. 3 Oregon, No. 4 Ohio State and No. 5 Cincinnati all moved up one spot behind No. 1 Georgia and No. 2 Alabama in the second College Football Playoff rankings, which were released Tuesday night.

Two Southeastern Conference teams sat atop the ranking for a second straight week, but after Michigan State lost last weekend, at least one spot in the top four was certain to change.

The committee simply bumped up the Ducks, Buckeyes and Bearcats and dropped Michigan State to No. 7 behind No. 6 Michigan.

The Spartans beat the Wolverines 37-33 just two weeks ago.

Unbeaten Oklahoma remained at No. 8 and Notre Dame and Oklahoma State rounded out the top 10.

There are three more regular-season rankings before the CFP selection committee sets the semifinal matchups and other New Year's Six bowls with its final Top 25 on Dec. 5.

The College Football Playoff semifinals will be played at the Orange Bowl and Cotton Bowl on Dec. 31.

The national championship game is scheduled for Jan. 10 in Indianapolis.

Coach K wins Garden finale as Duke tops Kentucky

BY DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Mike Krzyzewski's farewell tour started with a win thanks to his latest group of stellar freshmen at Duke.

Trevor Keels scored 25 points and classmate Paolo Banchero added 22 to help the No. 9 Blue Devils open their coach's final season by beating 10th-ranked Kentucky 79-71 on Tuesday night in the nightcap of the Champions Classic.

"It was an amazing game that felt so good with the Garden crowd and playing against an outstanding team," Krzyzewski said. "They are tough and we are tough. That was a big-time game. Really big time."

Krzyzewski announced that he would retire at the end of the season. The Hall of Famer has won 1,098 games and five national championships in his 42 years coaching the Blue Devils. Overall he has 1,171 wins, the most in the history of the sport.

"We wanted to get this win for Coach in this first game," Banchero said. "We had a chance to make a statement with this game and come out and play well. That's what we were thinking about coming in."

The two basketball blue bloods, who have quite the history between them on the game's biggest stage, put on a spectacular show to open the season. The loud split crowd at Madison Square Garden that included many members of the New York Knicks and Bruce Springsteen was on its feet for most of the second half.

Duke, which led by four at halftime, built the advantage to 15 with just under 10 minutes left behind Keels. The Wildcats wouldn't go away, scoring the next 11 points to get to 69-65 on a three-point play by Oscar Tshiebwe with 6:07 left.

That's as close as Kentucky could get.

"We got it to four and then we'll watch the tape," Kentucky coach John Calipari said. "Two shots blocked. All I said all week is if you drive, don't get it blocked."

Keels scored on the Blue Devils' next possession and Banchero followed with a three-point play after a huge block by Mark Williams to start a 7-0 run.

Kentucky only got within six the rest of the way.

"We're never going to back down from a fight, we'll always play to the end," said Kentucky's Jacob Toppin.

Tshiebwe finished with 17 points and 19 rebounds. Sahvir Wheeler added 16 points and 10 assists for the Wildcats.

PARTING GIFTS

With this being Krzyzewski's last game at MSG, the Garden front office staff presented his family with a few gifts before the game. They made a donation to the Emily K Center and gave him a framed photo mosaic that had more than 300 images from his time at MSG. Finally, they gave him six bottles of wine, each with a custom label from some of his top moments at the Garden, including his 1,000th victory and one from when he was a player for Army and his team played South Carolina at MSG.

BIG PICTURE

Duke's sensational freshmen didn't disappoint and could carry the Blue Devils a long way this season. Kentucky looked good in spurts and the early season loss will only help the Wildcats get better.

CHEERING ON THEIR SCHOOLS

The Knicks players were divided with their rooting interests. Julius Randle, Nerlens Noel and Kevin Knox II all went to Kentucky, while RJ Barrett attended Duke. They were all sitting courtside. Obi Toppin didn't go to either school, but his brother Jacob plays for Kentucky. The Knicks' second-year forward was sitting with his mom Roni, who was celebrating her birthday.

BLUE DEVILS SUCCESS AT MSG

Krzyzewski has gone 34-11 at MSG, including winning five of the last six there. The Blue Devils are 39-18 overall at the arena.

SHOOTING WOE FROM DEEP

Duke missed 12 of its 13 3-point attempts.

"We hope we could shoot better from 3," Krzyzewski said. "Give credit to Kentucky. They really play good defense. They have depth and they have old depth. They did a great job of taking away 3s and recovering."

TIP-INS

The Champions Classic will be extended through 2025. It started in 2011 and has always had Michigan State, Kansas, Duke and Kentucky participating. ... No. 3 Kansas beat Michigan State 87-74 in the opener. ... Duke improved to 7-4 at the Champions Classic. ... Duke has had the best of the rivalry recently. The Blue Devils have won five of the last six against the Wildcats.

Hoosiers start new era, nip Eastern Michigan

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOOMINGTON — Trayce Jackson-Davis enjoyed having the fans back inside Indiana's home arena Tuesday night.

He thought they made a difference, too.

The preseason All-American scored 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds, helping Indiana withstand Eastern Michigan's frantic second-half rally to hold on for a 68-62 victory.

"I know dang near half of our team had never experienced an Assembly Hall crowd before," he said. "They really helped us and I think got them (the Eagles) out of their rhythm, too."

Indiana has won 22 of its last 23 season openers and led this one from start to finish, giving new coach Mike Woodson a win in his first college game after spending the last quarter-century on NBA benches.

For 25 minutes, it looked like the Hoosiers would cruise behind a dominant defense. But after extending the lead to 48-28 with 14:21 to go, things started going awry.

Eastern Michigan scored the next nine points, trimming the deficit to 11. Then Noah Farrakhan started making perimeter shots and when he knocked down a short jumper 2:46 left, capping a 16-3 spurt, Indiana's lead shrunk to 59-58.

"Finally when we start playing a lot better, moving the ball, sharing it, getting better shots that's what ignited our comeback," first-year coach Stan Heath said after his debut. "We showed that we're going to fight and compete and I'm happy with that."

But after struggling at the free-throw line in the closing minutes, Indiana made just enough to prevent Eastern Michigan from taking the lead.

Farrakhan made three 3-pointers and finished with 18 points. Bryce McBride added 12.

STAT PACK

Eastern Michigan: Colin Golson Jr. had nine points and eight rebounds. Nate Scott added 10 rebounds. ... The Eagles battled to a near draw in rebounds, trailing just 43-42. ... Eastern Michigan is 0-5 in the all-time series. ... The Eagles are 14-30 when playing their opener on the road.

Indiana: Xavier Johnson scored 14 points in his Hoosiers debut. Race Thompson had five points and 10 rebounds. ... The Hoosiers committed just eight turnovers. ... Indiana forced a shot-clock violation on its first defensive possession and also forced a five-second call in the first half. ... The Hoosiers started their 50th season of play inside Assembly Hall on Tuesday. Former coach Bob Knight won the first game in the building, defeating Ball Sate 84-77 on Dec. 1, 1971.

BIG PICTURE

Eastern Michigan: The second-half was a promising sign for an Eagles offense that had struggled . It took nearly 7½ minutes for Eastern Michigan to score its first points. But they overcame the poor shooting and costly turnovers to make it a contest. The next task is correcting the mistakes that put them in the deep hole.

Indiana: With three new starters, a revamped roster and new philosophies at both ends of the floor, this looked like a completely different team. Yes, the Hoosiers need more offensive consistency to close out wins. But they played tight, strong defense most of the night and that proved to be the difference.

BOOKEND RETURN

Heath is starting his second coaching stint as a Mid-American Conference coach and in an odd twist, he opened his tenure at his alma mater against the same opponent he closed the first chapter. In 2002, Heath led Kent State to the Elite Eight before losing to an Indiana squad that fell to Maryland in the national championship game. Heath was a backup point guard for the Eagles from 1983-87.

Woodson rekindles Knight memories in coaching debut

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOOMINGTON — Indiana fans welcomed coach Mike Woodson back to Assembly Hall with a rousing ovation Tuesday.

He walked off the court with a new addition for his trophy case.

After months of wondering what new wrinkles the former Hoosiers star would install and hoping yet another coaching change would finally restore the Hoosiers' glorious past, Woodson finally got a chance to show everyone the work he's done.

"It feels good to be 1-0, but we've got a long way to go," he said after Indiana held on for a 68-62 victory over Eastern Michigan, Woodson's first as a college coach. "And I will keep that ball as a souvenir."

"It feels good to be 1-0, but we've got a long way to go."
— Mike Woodson, IU men's basketball coach

The opening day of college basketball tipped off Tuesday filled with hope, certainly at Indiana and some five dozen schools that changed coaches during a tumultuous offseason, including the Hoosiers' opponent. The Eagles also brought back one of their former players, Stan Heath.

Woodson isn't the biggest name or most prominent school on the list of changes.

Hubert Davis dressed in a powder blue pullover for his first game since replacing three-time national champion Roy Williams at North Carolina. The 19th-ranked Tar Heels rolled past Loyola (Maryland) 83-62.

Mike Krzyzewski, a five-time national champ and the career leader in wins, begins his final season at No. 9 Duke with his successor Jon Scheyer at his side for a showdown against No. 10 Kentucky. Former national runner-up coach Chris Beard left Texas Tech for Texas, where he replaced Shaka Smart, and begin his next chapter Tuesday against Houston Baptist. Smart wound up at Marquette.

Porter Moser, who led Loyola Chicago to the Final Four and replaced Lon Kruger at Oklahoma, made his debut against Northwestern State.

And new Arizona coach Tommy Lloyd started his new job against Northern Arizona. The Wildcats fired Sean Miller in the spring while Indiana made the same decision with Miller's brother, Archie, opening the door for Woodson's hiring — and much-anticipated debut.

It was a fitting start for a new era at Indiana.

In December 1971, Bob Knight made his Indiana debut at the grand opening of one of the state's best-known basketball cathedrals. This time, as the Hoosiers tipped off their 50th season inside the building, Woodson became the first true Knight disciple to return to the Indiana bench — though longtime assistant Dan Dakich served in that capacity briefly as an interim coach.

"I'm excited for the change," said 56-year-old Walter Marker, a fan from New Castle, Indiana. "I think he'll bring in some talent and expose the guys to an NBA style. I think it's a great culture change, similar to Bob Knight, and when you talk to people around New Castle, everyone's excited."

Woodson, the first Indiana alum to run the program without an interim title since Lou Watson was hired in 1965, sensed it. Longtime fans remember how Woodson dazzled fans on high school courts around Indianapolis before playing for Knight from 1977-80.

The 63-year-old Woodson said he received dozens of ticket requests from friends and family and wasn't sure how he'd react to coaching his first college game after spending the past quarter-century on NBA benches.

"I haven't been in that atmosphere in a long, long time," Woodson said on the eve of his debut. "I think when I walk out on the floor and I see the fans, that's going to be nice.

"But it's all about trying to get these guys to play at a high level."

players. Older sister Kelsey was a standout player at Madison before graduating three years ago.

As a result, Chloe has spent her life around the game and it shows on the floor. What other players struggle to do seems to come naturally to her.

"She has a lot of experience under her belt, especially just with the family she grew up in and being in the gym all the time and I think that really helps her to thrive," Crim said. "Some of the things that we're trying to teach girls about the game she has an understanding for so she's able to focus more on the other side of the net as opposed to her own play. So it really helps seeing our entire court, not just worrying about her position. She knows her positions and now she can focus on what everybody else is doing and how she can kind of bridge a gap if there is one on our side of the net as well. So I think that her experience really helps her to be a better player."

As an outside hitter, Preocanin blasted 314 kills — second in the area only to Shawe's Emmaline Leatherman. On defense, she rotates back where she collected 227 digs, second on the team to Taylor Harsin's 234 and fifth-most in the area. She also had 53 service aces, fifth-most in the area.

Despite those stats, if there is one area Preocanin struggles, it's confidence. In the past, she would allow a mistake to haunt her the rest of a game. However, her coach said she's improved there, too, and did a better job of controlling her emotions this year.

"She has learned that being OK with a mistake and shaking it off and knowing that sometimes even the perfect plays don't always work out," Crim said. "She's so hard on herself and her expectations are too high sometimes and I know that's that sounds like a good thing, but she stresses herself out more than anything."

"Whenever I'm on the court I focus on more things than just my side. Like coach said, I focus a lot on the other team," Preocanin said. "I always watch for things the other team is doing and I feel like once you watch it so many times, your body will end up doing it."

Preocanin is unsure about her volleyball future. She wants to play in college — Crim believes she has a high enough ceiling — but Preocanin also wants to become a sports photographer. So finding the perfect balance of both will be her priority over the next year.

"I want to definitely find a school that has the program that I want first before I figure anything out. I did realize earlier this year that I do want to play volleyball in college," Preocanin said. "If I can play volleyball and go to a school that has what I want to do, then that'd be perfect and I'd love that. But if it's not in the cards, or if it's a really high level in school, I will be happy just playing on the club team."

"I think that she can do whatever she wants to. The sky's the limit. If she wants to go Division I, I can see her getting there," Crim said. "The ball's in her court. I think she's capable of anything. It's just what she decides to put her mind to. That's exciting for her."

Kaufman-Renn and Brian Waddell.

Painter said it was Kaufman-Renn's decision to redshirt with Purdue's depth in the post.
